

Art Planner 2019

Rs 400

The concerns for sustainable environment are becoming more and more pressing with pollution levels reaching inhabitable proportions, particularly in the glorious city of Delhi. Delhi has many layers of history, its inclusiveness of cultures, people, food, heritage, architecture and, importantly, urbanity. For each ruler, who ruled from Delhi, be it Shah Jahan, the colonial British or our very own Indians in post Independent India, Delhi has been the sign posts of many new trajectories.

Here at the Visual Arts Gallery (VAG), India Habitat Centre we too are creating novel ways of looking at sustainability and environment through visual arts and culture. For the Art Planner 2019, we are looking at the contemporary landscape. Within this changing visage of the environment we have incorporated the many simple processes of permaculture.

Every month has some insightful illustration accompanied by a singular activity, which may be followed to reduce the carbon footprints and enhance the air quality. The feel good factor to every user of the diary is that she/he is contributing their own personal efforts, however small they maybe, to make a better and more sustainable physical environment.
